

Wendy Blight

Wendy's greatest passion is sharing the transforming power of God's Word. She delights in bringing God's Word to others and making it relevant and applicable to everyday life. Wendy teaches with a transparent vulnerability that enables her to connect directly to the heart of all women. As a survivor of a violent crime, Wendy has endured unimaginable heartache and pain. Although fear held her captive for over a decade, her story is now an amazing testimony of God's strength in our weakness, His hope in our hopelessness, and His healing in our brokenness.

Wendy and Monty, her husband of twenty years, live in Charlotte, North Carolina, where they are raising their two children Lauren (14) and Bo (10). In addition to being a wife and mother, Wendy is a caring friend, speaker, author, and Bible teacher. Before moving to Charlotte, she practiced law in Dallas, Texas for several years. Wendy's book (release date February 2009), Hidden Joy in a Dark Corner: The Transforming Power of God's Story, offers the reader a step-by-step walk through God's Word to find physical, spiritual, and emotional healing.

Wendy has such a precious way of imparting the riches of God's Word to the hearts of those in her audience. While speaking Truth, Wendy continues to show her daily dependence and hope found in her Savior, Jesus Christ. Her vulnerability keeps her approachable and real, making people immediately connect with her.

Wendy has an authentic passion for women to hear God's Truth and allow it to set them free from any and all captivity they are experiencing. Women sit closer to listen to Wendy, and God uses her story to break down walls that women have built around their hearts and hurts. She is beautiful inside and out. This beauty draws women to her.

Wendy allowed our moms to read and process God's Word for themselves, some for the first time. They understood time with God is not a task to check off but an opportunity to sit and allow God to wash them with His powerful Word and work in their lives wherever they are. She is real and did not pretend to be perfect. It was refreshing and encouraging for our women because she made what she has in Christ seem real and attainable. Her honesty, vulnerability, and tenderness as she shared stories from her past and as a mother, allowed the women to translate it to their lives. She is a woman after God's heart, and I am thankful that she blessed us with her words, time, and beauty.

Wendy's testimony, teaching, and assignments really touched my heart. Wendy teaches from a position of vulnerability, making it easy to relate and connect to her. She has an amazing ability to bring God's word to life and make Scripture relevant and applicable to our everyday lives. Through her teachings, she challenged me to study and memorize scripture, and by asking penetrating questions, she encouraged me to reflect on my personal relationship with Christ in a way that I have never done before.
